RIDING AND SHOWING HORSES

has taught me bravery - because you always have to get back on; humbleness - because although everything might be going perfectly, you still might be dead last; persistence - because even though it's practically impossible, you have to keep working your hardest for it to pay off; and trust - because there is nothing in the world like having a special bond with a horse. All of these lessons, and many more, have already helped me so much in every aspect of my life and will continue to help me forever. They are especially important to my passions and future in singing, the medical field, horses, and also life in general.
